

Will your child make the grade this year?

If not, UCLL can provide innovative language, learning and literacy programs to help guide them to academic success.

For more than 60 years, the University of Michigan Center for the Development of Language and Literacy (UCLL) has provided intensive language therapy for children ages 3 - 17. All of UCLL's programs are conducted by Masters-level speech-language clinicians.

Evaluations and Consultations

In-depth, comprehensive assessment of language, reading and writing skills conducted by speech-language clinicians.

Intensive, Individual Language Therapy

Comprehensive, individualized therapy for speaking, listening, reading, and writing. Year-round, for all ages.

Learning to Learn

An ongoing program for children with language, learning and literacy difficulties. Designed to improve skills for academic success. Meets twice weekly.

Friendship Club

For children who need help making friends and understanding social relationships. Ideal for children with language-learning disabilities, attention deficit disorders, autism and high-functioning Asperger Syndrome.

University Center for the Development of Language and Literacy

If your child is at risk in the classroom,
contact the language experts at UCLL

734-764-8440

www.umich.edu/~comdis